INTRODUCTION

HOST:

Hello everyone! Welcome to a tiny corner of my brain, I'm your host Jessica Arasa and this is Almost Certain, the podcast where I interview myself because who better to interview myself than myself.

How are you feeling Jess?

ME:

Good, thank you. And yourself?

HOST:

Fantastic! Let's start, first question.
What drives your creative work?

ME:

Uncertainty and Vulnerability.
add onto answer

HOST:

What inspired the work you've done recently/

ME:

To be honest my upbringing - the culture. Having that filipino heritage but growing up with Spanish influence.
Might be controversial because of colonialism but I made visuals, created a short film and wrote a script.
I built a whole mini world around belonging to more than one place.

HOST:

What are you most proud of?

ME:

Not giving up, not quitting!

HOST:

Final Question, what do you hope people take from your work?

ME:

It's going to sound super weird but I think when you're creating, let yourself enjoy every part of the process.

HOST:

Thanks so much Jess!
